Mike Vanderwolf updates his teaching skills

Mike has been keeping himself busy completing a Bio Swing Dynamics Certification in Orlando, Florida and was fortunate enough to be invited into the world of 104-time Long Drive Champion, Kelly Murray this winter.

Mike was honoured to share in Kelly's secrets and experiences and learn what went into hitting the longest drive ever recorded. The drive, recorded by the Guinness Book of World records was some 684 yards. Mike was able to discuss Kelly's approaches to creating power in a golf swing in depth as well as the effort and intelligence that went into winning at a "tour" level as he has done on several occasions.

The Bio Swing Dynamics Certification is a 2-day study of bio mechanics and the unique relationship an individuals golf swing has with respect to their physical structure. The workshop was attended by 50 PGA of America, European PGA and PGA of Canada members many of whom are recognized as the top 100 teachers in the game. Training included a screening process to determine efficient and effective traits of the individual golfer, and a greater ability to determine what works for them and why.

Since Mike's return from the training, the results have been incredible. Golfers he is working with are commenting that their ball is flying straighter and farther with simple adjustments to their set up and swing patterns. They are also finding more centered contact and are moving with greater ease, which must explain all the smiles.

Mike works with golfers of all ages and abilities. He provides a complete and thorough learning experience utilizing all of the facilities, equipment and techniques available, and in some cases includes tournament coaching.
